

Last Call Cleveland is a sketch comedy group with a terrible name from America's Most Miserable City (according to Forbes Magazine). But somehow, they've still managed to sell out their multi-media live show all over the place. From New York to Los Angeles to D.C. to Toronto to Chicago, they've received rave reviews for their combination of live and taped sketches, songs, and audience interaction. They're also the geniuses behind the Internet sensations "One Semester Of Spanish Love Song," "Honest R&B Song," "Hastily Made Cleveland Tourism Video," and the Break.com original series "Man In The Box."

To sum up, Last Call Cleveland is amazing. So give them some of your money, or bring them to your college or state fair or whatever the hell. It would be the best decision you've ever made in your entire life — including being born. So let's do this.
